Welcome to Civil and Environmental Engineering groups

Features of Departments

The Department of Civil and Environmental Engineering of the Graduate School of Engineering was established in 1961, after the great damage by Typhoon Ise-wan. The departments have promoted education and research to foster international civil engineers and researchers who can take leadership with advanced expertise, practical skills, flexible ideas, global views and higher ethical standards for sustainable co-development of Japan and Foreign countries in civil engineering field.

In 1987, the Forefront Studies program was started as a special international program supported by the Japanese Ministry of Education, Culture, Sports, Science and Technology, and the department has received more than 150 students from foreign countries including developing countries. In 2001, the Graduate school of Environmental Studies was established, as the first interdisciplinary postgraduate course in Japan by integrating from natural sciences to engineering and social scientists. In addition, the Nagoya University Global Environmental Leaders Program (NUGELP) was established in 2008 to develop environmental leaders who are able to identify and investigate environmental problems from a global and holistic perspective, and propose practical measures to solve them in the world.

A large number of graduates mainly from the both international programs are supporting the growth of Japan and foreign countries as specialist of respective fields.

Civil & Environmental Engineering International Program Office

Civil and Environmental Engineering International Programs Office (CEEIPO) aims to assist the academic life of international students by providing information for admissions, orientation and 2 types of International Programs (NUGELP and Forefront Studies Program). We welcome any questions and inquiries you have about our activities.
